HB4105

HB 4105 tilts the balance of needs much toward an industry & away from/against the well-being of water supply, carbon sequestration, natural habitats - including for endangered species, wise protection of fire resistant elder trees, lovely recreation away from the harshness of the unnatural world, HB 4105 conflicts with the wishes of Oregonians to comply with State Forester intelligent harvest levels & the economic value to the state recreation economy & the smart jobs that go with that. HB 4105 conflicts with the highest priority that a wise society defends: clean water & a solid watershed - especially given Western drought threat and shrinking water supply. HB 4105 conflicts with the essential wisdom of & necessity to store carbon - -as elder trees do so well. We can't fake science & the workings of the natural world. We can protect the irreplaceable upon which our existance relies.
