

Submitter:

Lyndon Beckner

On Behalf Of:

Committee:

Senate Committee On Judiciary

Measure, Appointment or Topic:

SJR203

Law enforcement agents should always clearly show their faces and display proper credentials and name information when interacting with the public. Visible identification promotes transparency, accountability, and public trust by allowing individuals to know who is exercising authority over them. When officers are identifiable, it helps distinguish legitimate law enforcement from impersonators, reduces fear and confusion, and reinforces the principle that policing is carried out in service to the community, not in anonymity.