Measure, Appointment or HB4032
Topic:

It's not a matter of if, but when. Natural disasters and extreme weather events always happen. It's only a matter of time before a wildfire, earthquake, or another catastrophe affects the bulk fuels storage site in Portland.

If an emergency like this arises in Portland, the rest of the state will likely be cut off from fuel supplies. This will mean serious impacts to emergency services, transportation, and business.

The state should explore alternative and dispersed fuel storage across the state while considering impacts to human health and the environment.
