Logging is destructive. creating roads to get in and out of harvests also destroys huge amounts of forest which wildlife are dependant on. Motorized equipment leaves polluting residue on forest floors. slash piles are fire dangers. an area logged looks like a disaster zone (because it is) Once loggers are given permission to begin logging opperations the potential to expand the areas logged is extremely likely. Oregon's wildlife has a very sad loss in population. The huge majority of citizens of Oregon and guests love the forests and wildlife. Promoting the loss of forest will cause an oregon government representative to lose their support base. This wonderful asset of our state should not be a bounty of logging companies. loggers see forests as something they want to destroy for their income.
