I was lucky to attend Outdoor School many years ago when I was in middle school growing up in Portland. It was a critical moment for my education and growth. Education was so immersive and exciting and there was so many friendships and growth in community through the experiences. I've had the chance to visit since then and it's so wonderful to see wholistic learning happening. It molds people to be community oriented and positive members in life. There is a curiosity that is fostered in these space that is so sacred and inspiring to be reigniting and feeding in children. This is a wonderful system that is important to not be overlooked or ignored!
