I do NOT vaccinate my kids.
Not out of fear, but out of responsibility.
Not out of pressure, but out of conviction.
Not because it's easy but because it matters.
I DONT vaccinate to protect their little bodies from toxin over loads. Because it isn't worth the gamble.
Their immune systems are still developing and the last thing they need is a toxin overload to overcome.
No one benefits from sick children.
I asked the questions.
I read the data.
I spoke with medical professionals I trust.
I weighed risks versus benefits and it was clear the science isnt settled.
The decision wasn't made lightly.
It was made intentionally.
It was made lovingly.
It was made wholeheartedly.

Until the vaccine "safety" data is updated following random double blind inert placebo studies, there is nothing that proves the vaccines are safe or effective, nor convinces me to provide them to my children or myself.

Vaccines can be available but should never be mandated. Vaccines can be provided to those who choose to take them. There is no force. There is no coercion. There is absolutely ZERO incentive, benchmarks or measures to be "met" by any provider or medical entity based on a mere number of vaccines provided to children. Because that creates an incentive based medical approach.

There should 100 percent ALWAYS be INFORMED CONSENT. I was informed of risks and benefits and I DO NOT CONSENT. Nor do I support this bill in its entirety. I'm no longer willing to give up my children's health for a so called science experiment. It has caused too much personal harm already. Never again.
