Some lawmakers want to hire a "third party contractor" to complicate decision making about our school system. If complication is the goal, third party contractors are the perfect tool to accomplish it. I'm very familiar with them from my late husband's life work of traffic maintenance and public works. They're out for themselves, they stir up division, pocket the money and disappear. Don't let grifters piss away our children's future in pursuit of a bad faith promise of utopian perfection.
