SB1587

I oppose SB1587. We all want our personal data protected, but this bill adopts an unjustified and vague standard for businesses that share information from the public domain used directly or indirectly for civil law enforcement. Financial institutions use brokered data to protect individuals from identity theft, work to combat money laundering, and local and state government use brokered data in locating individuals who are delinquent on their child support obligations. This bill could have significant implications. Please do not advance SB1587.
