I'm opposed to this change to land use. Some people are presenting this as a false choice between job growth and preserving high quality farmland. Data centers don't hire many people but farms certainly do. Given the warming of the planet, we all need to be thinking about food security as a form resilience in the coming years and protecting area farmland is a big part of that. Personally, I'd like my grandkids (if I am so blessed) to be able eat. Can't eat microchips.
