YOUR ANSWERS

You are experiencing one or more of the following symptoms:

Consistent diarrhea

Frequent gas and bloating

Unexplained stomach pain

Unexplained weight loss

Oily stools that float or stick inside the toilet

Yes

Though GI symptoms may seem like nothing more than “stomach issues” at first, if you’re experiencing one, some, or all of the following symptoms, it could be a sign of EPI.

You have been experiencing these symptoms for about:

More than 6 months

EPI symptoms may worsen over time. Even if symptoms are currently minor, it's important to track how long you've been experiencing them.

You have the following underlying conditions:

No, none of these conditions

There are several underlying conditions for EPI. Identifying your experience with one or more of these conditions can help prevent misdiagnosis and assist your doctor in providing proper care.

You have had the following procedures:

No, none of these procedures

There are several procedures that may also affect the pancreas and cause EPI.

You are currently taking medications and/or supplements for your symptoms.

No

A complete medical history is crucial for your doctor to diagnose and treat any condition. Along with prescription medications, any over-the-counter treatments for GI symptoms (such as Imodium® or Tums®), vitamins, and/or supplements you are taking should also be shared with your provider.

Next steps

- 1. Schedule an appointment with your doctor to talk about your symptoms. Bring these Symptom Checker results with you for an in-person visit or have them ready for your televisit.
- 2. Have a complete list of everything you are taking (any prescription or over-the-counter medications, vitamins, and/or supplements) to share with your doctor.
- 3. Be ready to answer questions about your Symptom Checker responses.
