This bill comes across as very short-sighted to rely on big tech and data centers for our future job market. There are no limits on the number of data centers that can be built, which is a large issue. Tax breaks, city funds to make these areas more accessible, water and power use, no guarantee around making sure competitive and high-earning jobs are required to stay on site for more than 5/10 years. These are all reasons why it seems like a cheap redistribution of resources from agriculture to big tech. No thank you. Try again and make user the community is bought in.
